The farmhouse itself requires complete renovation.

Livestock Shed

The livestock shed is of part timber and part steel frame construction, with concrete block walls and a concrete floor, together with corrugated sheet walls and roof. The building is twin span with an adjoining lean-to, which has concrete block walls and floor.

Around the edge of the farmstead are three concrete bases where previous agricultural buildings and feed silos have been removed. Opportunities may exist to redevelop buildings on these bases, subject to the necessary planning and other consents as required.
