LOCATION AND DIRECTIONS

Llanpumsaint is a small rural village located in Carmarthenshire, West Wales. Nestled in the rolling countryside of the Gwili Valley, it's known for its peaceful surroundings, agricultural heritage, and strong sense of community. The name "Llanpumsaint" translates to "Church of the Five Saints" in Welsh, referencing five saintly brothers who, according to legend, established a religious settlement there in the early Christian period.

Surrounded by farmland, wooded hills, and streams, Llanpumsaint offers picturesque walks and views typical of rural Carmarthenshire. Though small, the village maintains a lively community spirit with a village hall, occasional local events, and active residents.

7 Miles from the county town of Carmarthen with its modern shopping centre offering both traditional and larger multi national retailers and supermarkets, excellent restaurants, cinema, theatre and many other amenities. There is a mainline railway station as well as easy access on to the A40 & A48 with connection to the M4.

The property is located by traveling North out of Carmarthen on the A484 and after approximately 2 miles turn right into the village of Bronwydd, Carry on through Bronwydd and continue on this road till you get to the left turning for Llanpumsaint. Turn left here, follow this road to the village and as you go down the hill into the village take a right turning signposted Alltwallis. Follow this road and as you leave the village you will see Oakland on your right.
